His father attended Medical School at the University of Pennsylvania and was able to pay for his tuition with money he received from the Guggenheim Foundation. R.W. and Maude tried to fund their son’s education as best they could during the Great Depression. Dr. Outland always recognized that his father would not have completed Medical School without additional support and knew he would one day set up a similar fund for future students. Dr. Outland now practices dentistry in Northampton County.

The Lois E. Taylor Endowment Fund was established by Mr. Frank Taylor and his sister, Dr. Sarah Morrow, in 1996 in honor of their mother, Lois E. Taylor, who was a kind and loving mother, a gentle lady and a superb dentist. Lois E. Taylor was a pioneer among women dental practitioners in North Carolina from 1915 until her retirement in 1980. She was born into a farm family of Gaston County in 1893, the youngest of nine children. Though she wanted to be a medical doctor, Dr. Taylor’s mother felt it inappropriate for a young woman to be “traipsing” all over the countryside in a horse-drawn buggy to take care of patients at all hours of the day or night. But her mother consented for Lois to study dentistry at the University of Maryland, School of Dentistry, Baltimore, from which she graduated in 1915. Shortly after graduation, Lois married Frank Victor Taylor, M.D., a graduate of the Medical College of Virginia. A joint practice was set up in Stanley, North Carolina. Dr. Taylor moved her office from Stanley to Charlotte in 1927 and continued to practice there until she was 86 years of age. Dr. Taylor died August 14, 1983.
